5th Battalion		Major	Saker,	R.	(since died of wounds) handled his company (although wounded on the early morning of the 25th April) with great coolness and skill, led his company during the attack throughout the day) and rendered conspicuous service in reorganizing the trenches on the night 25/26th, and continued until again severely wounded in an advance of the 27th. (Reported by Lt.-Colonel D.S.Wanliss)
		Lieut.	Capes,	G.H.	) "skilful and resourceful in handling the machine gun section) of his battalion.
	562	Serjt. Major	Marshall,	H.	) "from 25th to 29th April during the whole of which period they) were in action and rendered most valuable assistance. On 26th) April after an advance of some hundreds of yards the firing) line came under heavy rifle and shrapnel fire and began to) retire. These/two with Lieut. Rafferty, 12th Battalion) and a small party of different Battalions hung on to the) position for over half an hour. (Reported by Lieut.-Col. D.S.Wanliss) and Lieut.-Col. McNicoll