Detective Inspector Anthony Cerritelli is head of the Glenorchy CIB, Tasmania's Disaster Victim Identification (DVI) Coordinator and a member of the Tasmanian Police Bomb Response Group. He joined the Tasmania Police Force in 1986. He completed undergraduate studies at Charles Sturt University, postgraduate studies at the University of Tasmania and various Australasian DVI Courses. Following the terrorist attacks in Bali in 2002, he spent eight weeks in Indonesia, performing key management roles in DVI including a short period as Australian DVI Commander. In 2005, he was International Information Management Centre Commander responsible for the formal process of identifying victims of the tsunami in Thailand. He led a team of specialist police, forensic experts, DNA personnel, dentists, biologists and pathologists from thirty-five countries. He returned mid-2005 in the role of Australian DVI Commander. In 2005, Anthony Cerritelli was nominated for the Queen's Overseas Humanitarian Medal.
