Dr. Jeanette Fielding: Dominic College 1981–1983 and 1988–1993

Dr Jeanette Fielding is a nutritionist/researcher who investigates the incidence and impact of degenerative conditions such as heart disease, diabetes and cancer in relation to functional foods and diet. She completed her doctorate (2003) on a scholarship from Food Science Australia (CSIRO), where she was employed as a Research Scientist (1998-2000). She was awarded the Yakult Prize at Deakin University for the presentation of her Master's thesis (1998); a Roger Pysden Memorial Fellowship to the Universities of California & Illinois in the USA and the University of Milan in Italy, for work with international researchers for the benefit of the Australian Food Industry (1999); an RMIT University International Scholarship (2001); a SPIRT grant from the Australian Research Council (2002). She has written articles for the official AFL website and numerous papers, abstracts and articles for professional journals. She consults widely with government departments, sporting bodies, businesses and food companies.
