BUSINESS & COMMUNITY SERVICE

Anthony (Tony) Crossin: Savio College 1959 – 1966

Anthony (Tony) Crossin is an excellent example of what one can achieve with enterprise, hard work and a pioneering spirit. After leaving Savio College, Tony worked as a sales representative for the Hydro Electric Commission, then moved into the testing of Hydro meters used in Tasmanian homes and businesses. In 1994, Tony and three colleagues established their own business, Electrical Measurements and Testing, and took over the meter-reading services from the Hydro. Buying out a Government enterprise was an unprecedented entrepreneurial step, with the four businessmen risking everything to establish the business. In his time as an owner and director of this business, Tony has seen the company become very profitable and a highly successful operation. He is a man who has given importance to all that he has done for the betterment of both the business and the general community.
