

For release: 9am Fri 7 August, 2020

TEENY TINY STEVIES
NEW ALBUM THOUGHTFUL SONGS FOR LITTLE PEOPLE
OUT TODAY

“Blending beautiful melodies with important messages for kids, this beautiful album will uplift and inspire the whole fam” KINDERLING

Teeny Tiny Stevies are excited to unveil album number 3, Thoughtful Songs for Little People. It features singles ‘Had You To Teach Me’, ‘Good For Your Health’ and ‘Superpower’ and is the follow up 2018’s ARIA-nominated Helpful Songs for Little People.

Watch video for ‘Had You To Teach Me’ HERE

Sisters Beth and Byll Stephen are Teeny Tiny Stevies, the kids band with the cool factor. Beginning as a side hustle from their indie-folk band The Little Stevies, their tight harmonies, rich melodies and infernally catchy choruses have captured the ears of children and parents alike.

Their gorgeous videos (by longtime collaborator Simon Howe) have chocked up hundreds of thousands of views online, as well as over ten million views on ABC iView. Songs like ‘Boss of My Own Body’, ‘I Ate A Rainbow’ and ‘Sleep Through the Night’ have become part of the fabric of childhood for thousands of little Australians.

Discussing the new album, Byll says, "I know these are kids' songs, but as a songwriter I know parents are listening to these songs over and over again. So I like writing in a way where parents can get something out of them too, so songs like 'Superpower' has a really universal theme: obviously it's for kids, but I'm also thinking a parent can listen to it and think 'yep, I need to put a lid on my temper'."

"The Teeny Tinies have given Byll and I the opportunity to write songs in a hugely diverse range of genres," Beth adds. "And musically the songs become more and more complex which I feel very proud about."

Byll agrees. "We didn't want to approach the music differently than we would with 'grown-up' songs, and we'd put as much care and time and effort into our sounds and production and making our albums sound great."

And those messages are packed with emotion, clarity and humour - as on the this-house-is-a-mess anthem Family Is A Team. "We're very keen to not in any way act like parenting experts, because we're not," Byll laughs. "I don't want any of our songs to ever sound like we're telling people how they should do things."

And with songs about resilience, self-care and personal hygiene, it also might be the most on-message album of 2020.

"These songs were written at least 18 months ago, and we thought they were pertinent then," says Beth. "But going through this year with everything that's happened everything seems more relevant!"

THOUGHTFUL SONGS FOR LITTLE PEOPLE

NEW ALBUM OUT NOW

Access media assets HERE

ABOUT TEENY TINY STEVIES

Teeny Tiny Stevies create inspired and educational music which encourages conversation between adults and children. What began as a hobby for sisters Byll and Beth became so fun and effective that before they knew it, their debut album had become a word-of-mouth sensation with parents around the country.

The band's beautifully-animated music videos, including 'Boss of My Own Body', 'I Ate a Rainbow', 'Sleep Through the Night' and 'Boy or Girl Colour' continue to be hugely popular on ABC Kids TV, and to date have received over 10 million views on iView.

Teeny Tiny Stevies' first ever national tour sold out in a matter of days, and their second - which was set to be their biggest, culminating in a performance at Sydney Opera House - was cancelled due to Coronavirus. They are looking forward to rescheduling the tour and performing to families around Australia as soon as they can.

FOLLOW TEENY TINY STEVIES

Website: <https://www.teenytinystevies.com/>
Instagram: <https://www.instagram.com/teenytinystevies/>
Facebook: <https://www.facebook.com/teenytinystevies>
YouTube: <https://www.youtube.com/teenytinystevies>
Twitter: <https://twitter.com/teenytinystevie>