

3.

across his name upon the grave. He had died in 1848. The surroundings are peaceful and lovely and a suitable resting place for a man who had braved the long voyages in the little ships too and from early Australia and had been a Pioneer and explorer on our Blue Mountains. He was not a bushranger and his name will ever live through having been the discoverer of the famous leap.

From Arch deacon Boyce
with photo