"Q" INSTRUCTION.

METHOD OF LOADING AND UNLOADING M.T. VEHICLES ON RAILWAY FLAT TOP WAGGONS:

(1) Approach :

Army Transport Drivers will be responsible for driving machanised vehicles on to Railway flat trucks.
As the vehicle approaches the railway waggon over the end loading ramp, it will be lined up as accurately as possible with the sides of the waggons and a responsible person will be detailed to guide the driver on to the waggon.
After the vehicle enters upon the ramp, all movement will be in bottom gear.
When a number of vehicles are being entrained, the rake of railway waggons to be loaded will normally be drawn up to the ramp complete and the vehicles will drive over the line of railway waggons until they reach their final position.
The spaces between waggons must be bridged with special end loading boards (2 to each waggon)or railway sleepers.

Positioning :

Vehicles will be positioned centrally on the railway waggons both endways and sideways. If more than one vehicle is loaded on to one waggon, a clearance of not less than six (6) inches will be left between the vehicles. The overhang, if any, at either end of waggon, will be equalised as far as possible and must in no cases exceed six (6) inches beyond the end of the waggon, unless space is left on trailing railway waggon to compensate for overhang.

To assist drivers in transfer movement from waggon to waggon, a white line 3 inches wide should be painted from end to end in centre of each waggon.

(2) Securing of M.T. :

Each mechanised vehicle, when loaded, will be secured as follows :-

(i) To be left in the lowest gear with brakes on;
(ii) In case of tracked vehicles, ropes will be attached to the towing shackles or other suitable points and tightened to prevent swinging or lateral movement. Chocks will be wedged in front of and in rear of the tracks.

(iii) In the case of wheeled vehicles, chocks will be inserted under the front of front wheels and at the rear of rear wheels. Each vehicle will also be lashed securely to the waggon in such a manner as to prevent movement. Special care is to be taken that vehicles are not lashed by their roadsprings, and that if lashed by their axles there is no risk of the ropes fouling the oil pipes of the braking system.
The Unit Loading Party will be responsible for the chocking, lashing and securing of vehicles for travel under supervision of the Railway Officials.

P.T.O

AUSTRALIAN WAR MEMORIAL AWM2022.5.1231

(3) Escorts :

Two Other Ranks will travel on each railway waggon on which mechanised transport is loaded and will, from time to time, inspect the lashings.

(4) Driving Off :

Driving off the railway waggon will be done in bottom gear and a responsible person will direct the driver.

(5) Petrol Supply - M.T. Vehicles :

The amount of petrol in the fuel tanks of mechanised vehicles will be regulated as nearly as possible so that there will be sufficient to enable the vehicle to be entrained and detrained.
After entrainment, the petrol tap will be turned off and engine started and run until carburettor is dry.
