MORALE.

Recent developments have demonstrated a high standard of keenness on the part of all ranks and a desire to maintain a proper standard of efficiency and readiness which is commendable.

Unfortunately, however, there has been noticed in some quarters an unnecessary degree of excitement, and even panic, which is not only bad for morale but has an unsteadying effect upon the public.

The Corps Comd directs that all in authority will do their utmost to engender a spirit of calmness not only in all ranks under their command but in members of the public with whom they they come in contact.

The present situation is one which is liable to recur at any time over the next several months, and must be accepted as one of the risks of war for which all are prepared in the normal course of duty.

It is finally pointed out that, except for certain units under special orders, the degree of readiness ordered is such as to make it quite unnecessary to take such steps as recalling men from leave, wearing steel helmets, etc., which tend to produce the undersirable effects referred to above.
