

The Japanese position in East Asia and the East Pacific is encircled.

You can see from this map that it is encircled. The red splashes represent Allied air attacks on Japanese positions in one single month.

See how our air power encircles Japan.

This is only the beginning.

Where we raid now with 5, 10 or 20 aircraft, we shall attack in future with hundreds, thousands, or tens of thousands, if necessary.

You know that the Italian Air Force has been destroyed. Italy was thereby incapacitated and so surrendered. You know that Germany is attacked by day and night. 2,000 tons of bombs are often dropped on German cities and industries in a single raid.

This year the United Nations will build at least nine aircraft for each aircraft Japan can build.

The United States Army Air Force is growing in 1943 by 115,000 aircraft. The United States Navy Air Force is growing by 20,000 aircraft this year. Add to this all the power and resources of the British and Allied Air Forces.

Think of the growing weight of Allied air power.

The map represents only a beginning.

See how our power now surrounds and isolates Japan.
