1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to determine the scope of the problem. This involves identifying the specific area of concern and the individuals or groups affected by the problem. Once the scope of the problem is determined, the next step is to gather information about the problem. This involves conducting research, interviews, and surveys to gather data about the problem and its causes. The third step in the process is to analyze the information gathered. This involves identifying the key factors contributing to the problem and determining the most effective ways to address the problem. Finally, the fourth step is to develop and implement a plan of action. This involves creating a detailed plan of action that outlines the steps to be taken to address the problem and the resources needed to implement the plan.
