"Died of Wounds".

Pte. J. J. Carrol was too badly wounded in the abdomen to admit of an operation. He lived about 48 hours during which time I saw him two or three times. I wrote to his friends. He was particularly anxious that they should know he had all the last sacraments, and the presence of a priest at his death. He is buried in Grevillers Military Cemetery. The grave is well cared for, and cross and inscription of durable material over the grave.

Died of wounds 15/5/17.

I knew Carroll well. He was amate of mine. We went over together. I know his people. He was killed at Bullecourt on 15th or 16th of May, just at the end of the stunt. He was buried in a shell hole. We put up a cross. He was very well liked.

Died of wounds 15/5/17.

I knew a Carroll, he was with me in No.11 Platoon. C.Co. On the 15th May I was right alongside of him in the trenches, front line, at Pulleocourt when a shell burst in the trench and wounded Carroll. We moved him to the best shelter we could and later the stretcher bearers took him to the dressing Station. I did not hear of him again until I returned to Australia. Carroll was a boyish fellow about 20 years. I think fair complexion medium height, naggetty.
