I saw Renshaw after he was shot in the back. I saw him at the time he was struck and he did not think it was serious. There was a difficulty in getting him carried through the scrub. He was taken down about midnight. I heard when he got to the beach. He was boarded for England and that is the last I heard of him.

Witness says that Renshaw was in the landing and was digging a reserve line of trenches on McLagan's Ridge on the Sunday night. Bullets were flying about and Renshaw was hit in the groin and was pretty bad. He was taken to the beach by two men of the Section and they ascertained from the Ambulance next day that he had been put on board a ship, but not a hospital ship. Since then they have lost sight of him. Witness adds that he has heard that Renshaw's pay-book is lying in the Base Office in Cairo.
