	52nd. Bn. A. I. F.		Lieutenant George Maurice TRAVERS.	For gallantry and devotion to duty whilst in command of a platoon, and later when he took command of an adjoining Coy. after the O.C. had been wounded, during the operations near DELMANGCOURT on 5th April, 1918. Under very heavy shell fire during the earlier hours of the day, and later when subjected to severe Machine Gun fire, this Officer moved about amongst his men controlling and directing their fire, and inspiring all those under him with confidence. When the exposed flank of his Coy. was suffering from heavy enfilading H.O. fire during the afternoon, Liout. TRAVERS handled his command, which included a number of details of other units, in a masterly manner, steadying them during the withdrawal from the railway to the support trenches, and then, when the counter-attack against the enemy had developed, he led his men back to their original positions and assisted in bringing heavy fire to bear on the enemy falling back on DELMANGCOURT.	Lt-Col. J.L. WHITHAM, O.C. 52nd. Bn.	M.C.
