COLLINS was in charge of a Hotchkiss Gun, with a troop under the command of Sergeant PARGH. This troop by galloping past a post of the 162nd Infantry Brigade was able to occupy a railway cutting in time to check and hold up for some time the enemy attack that was developing. L/Cpl. COLLINS handled his gun brilliantly and materially assisted his troop leader in attaining his objective, namely checking the advancing enemy. This man's service has been consistently useful. He is always eager to enter on any enterprise no matter how difficult or hazardous it is. For his continued devotion to duty I consider him well worthy of reward. | Lt-Colonel,Commanding,6th LIGHT HORSE REGIMENT. H.
