

Site Unseen Taking en suite bathing to the next level, Bark Design Architects integrated bedroom and bath in this Noosa, Australia, home for an artist and an investment planner. The goals, as the Bark team put them, were "to create a loftlike feel," to maintain continuity between the two rooms, and to achieve a serene yet functional layout that maximizes space. Slide the door shut for a bit of privacy in the loo; or, if you're feeling expansive, leave it open. And from what better perch to chat with a sudsy bather than a Barcelona chair?

PROJECT:
Tinbeerwah House

ARCHITECT:
Bark Design Architects

LOCATION:
Noosa, Australia

PUBLISHED:
March 2009

PHOTOGRAPHER:
Richard Fowers

Bathtub
by Caroma
caromausa.com

HVS bathtub tap and 701 shower mixer
by Vola
vola.com

Sinktop
by Caesarstone
caesarstone.com

Custom shelving
by Bark Design
Architects
barkdesign.com.au

Barcelona chair
by Ludwig Mies
van der Rohe for Knoll knoll.com

Shower floor in black siltstone

Watch our video
"On Shelter Island"
part of the Bathroom Reinvented series,
to see an architect
couple who designed a custom bathroom
of their own.

