Construction update

In early September, an intensive period of work was completed within the rail corridor allowing construction of the Southern Tunnel Portal to continue. We thank you for your patience during this time.

A major project milestone was also achieved in September with the arrival of two roadheaders that excavated a total distance of 900 metres underground from the new Woolloongabba station to the new Boggo Road station.

Southern Tunnel Portal construction activities

In October, major rail corridor works will continue and will include:

- Building the foundations of the tunnel portal entrance near Railway Terrace including ongoing piling and related activities
- Ongoing 24-hour micro-tunnelling within the shaft at Dutton Street and travelling underneath Railway Terrace
- Continuing to build the tunnel portal structure and new above ground train lines within the Kent Street worksite
- Rail corridor works between Dutton Park, Park Road and Buranda stations
- Construction of a new retaining wall adjacent to Dutton Park station.

Boggo Road station construction activities

Works will continue to build the new Boggo Road station and cavern during October. These works will include:

- Continuing construction of the permanent station structure including the deepest section of the station
- Installing drainage within the base of the structure
