Aiming to maximise the sense of natural refuge within the inner city, the density of trees is increased dramatically in key locations. This creates deep shade and lush canopies— a new forest for everyone.

Under the canopy, a diverse network of active threads and experiences weave together providing unmatched variety of outdoor and well-being activities—something for everyone.

As a result, Victoria Park becomes an unparalleled destination in the city’s subtropical park network. It is an oasis that the people can make their own—an active forest for everyone.