Arsenal and Tottenham renew their North London rivalry in an enticing pre-season clash set to take place at Hong Kong's Kai Tak Sports Park on Thursday.

Mikel Arteta's side have wasted no time finding their rhythm on tour, racking up consecutive wins in Singapore. After Bukayo Saka fired them to a narrow victory over AC Milan, the Gunners displayed grit to overturn a deficit and edge Newcastle 3-2 in an all-Premier League affair.

On the other side, Spurs are still settling into life under new boss Thomas Frank, who took over from Ange Postecoglou during the off-season.

The Lilywhites began their summer campaign with a 2-0 win over Reading but were held to back-to-back draws against Wycombe Wanderers (2-2) and Luton Town (0-0), leaving fans eager to see how they fare against a more formidable test in Arsenal.

The Sporting News looks at the key details ahead of this game, including how to watch the match, kickoff times and the latest lineup news.

Is it possible to brand a north London derby as 'friendly'? Arsenal face Tottenham at Kai Tak Sports Park in Hong Kong.

The teams are battling to build their fitness and cohesion in pre-season, but there will be an inevitable edge to this one despite the scrap for bragging rights taking place 6,000 miles away from their usual territory.

New Spurs boss Thomas Frank has wasted no time shaping his team to play his style of football, while Mikel Arteta has been boosted by big-money signings, including Viktor Gyökeres, Martin Zubimendi, Noni Madueke and Cristhian Mosquera.
