Communicating positively
A guide to appropriate Aboriginal terminology
The painting – See when were talking right were walking in the right direction

The painting displays a centerpiece in the shape of an eye with the figures of people sitting around the inside. The dot work trailing from the mouths of the figures and blending into the circle of the eye is a representation of using the correct terminology.

Throughout the background there are lines of cross hatching which generally represent ownership or ownership of land. In this painting it is used as a symbol that we as people have ownership over our bodies and minds and therefore have a choice in the style of language that we use.

The footprints are seen heading in the one direction heading along the same dot work speech lines, to represent that once we have learnt the correct protocols and terminology we can utilize this and progress as a nation towards a brighter future.

The green circles which fade from dark to light in the center are representations of eradicating bad terminology and inappropriate use of dialogue, so that eventually through education of correct procedures these non-accepted ways will deteriorate.

By Kylie Cassidy
Central Coast Aboriginal Artist
Contents

Introduction ..................................................................................................................2

Terminology guide ......................................................................................................4

Collective names used to describe Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people ...............................................................9

Terms associated with Aboriginal communities and community organisations .................................................................14

Other terms ..............................................................................................................21

Terms not to be used ............................................................................................29

Additional resources .............................................................................................31

References ..............................................................................................................32
Introduction

Purpose

The purpose of this guide is to provide NSW Health staff with background information and guidance on appropriate word usage when working with Aboriginal people and communities, and when developing policy and programs to improve health outcomes for Aboriginal people. The use of accurate and non-offensive language is an essential component of Aboriginal cultural respect and communication training.

In developing this guide, the Aboriginal Health Branch (AHB) has worked closely with Aboriginal staff within the NSW Department of Health and Area Managers of Aboriginal Health (AMAHs) within Area Health Services (AHSs), as well as the Aboriginal Health and Medical Research Council of NSW (AH&MRC), the peak body representing Aboriginal Community Controlled Health Services (ACCHSs) in NSW.

Scope

This guide relates to Aboriginal people in NSW and gives the recommended word usage for NSW Health employees.

The authors of this guide have aimed to use current names and terminology selected by Aboriginal people themselves. Usage of some terminology may vary with location. If you are unsure about using a particular term, ask the local Aboriginal community/ies or ACCHSs to identify their preferred terms. Alternatively, contact the AMAH in your AHS, the AH&MRC, the local Aboriginal land council (LALC), or the AHB for further guidance.

Note that this guide does not list the many and varied names of individual Aboriginal language groups. Before European colonisation, at least 70 Aboriginal languages and dialects were spoken in the area now known as NSW. For further information about the names of these varied language groups, refer to Horton (1994).
Structure

An overview section outlining key aspects of Aboriginal history is provided on pages 6-7. The Terminology Guide starts on page 9 and lists a number of commonly used terms under four major categories:

- Collective names used to describe Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- Terms associated with Aboriginal communities and community organisations
- Other terms
- Terms not to be used.

A description of each term, as well as its recommended usage and issues for consideration, is provided in the remaining part of the document (pages 9-30). Additional reading and useful websites are listed on page 31.

The importance of non-discriminatory and accurate language

Following European colonisation, Aboriginal people were forbidden from speaking traditional languages and Aboriginal languages suffered enormous erosion as a result. English was used to describe and communicate with Aboriginal people and led to the use of inappropriate and often discriminatory language.

Generally, language can be seen as a direct reflection of the particular culture and beliefs that have given rise to it. For example, the English language is not capable of embodying the cultural imperatives, values and contexts associated with Aboriginal languages.

Because the European colonists did not understand and were generally prejudiced against Aboriginal ways of life, the language they used to address and describe Aboriginal people was often discriminatory and offensive.

Today, just as attitudes towards Aboriginal culture are changing, terms to describe Aboriginal people are continually evolving. Understanding the distinctions between the words, and to whom they apply, can be a challenge for NSW Health staff. However, using appropriate and accurate language is fundamental in ensuring the use of non-discriminatory language and developing positive relationships between Government staff and Aboriginal communities.
Terminology guide

For ease of use, the terms in this guide are arranged alphabetically and organised under four major categories.

Collective names used to describe Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Term</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Aboriginal / Aborigine</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aboriginal people (s)</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>First people / first Australians</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Indigenous people(s)</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Torres Strait Islander / person</td>
<td>12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Goori, Koori, Murri, Nunga and other such terms</td>
<td>13</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Terms associated with Aboriginal communities and community organisations

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Term</th>
<th>Page</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Clan</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Community</td>
<td>14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Country</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Elder</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mob</td>
<td>16</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nation</td>
<td>17</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Traditional owner</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tribe</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Other terms

Assimilation policy 21
Culture 22
Invasion/colonisation/settlement 23
Land rights 23
Mission/reserve 24
Native title 26
Pre/post contact 26
Protection policy 27
Self-determination 27
Stolen Generations 28

Terms not to be used 29

Them
Those people
You people
Half-caste
Quarter-caste
25%, 50% Aboriginal etc
Full-blood
Mixed blood
Overview

This guide explores the correct terminology to describe Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, as well as terms associated with Aboriginal communities and community organisations.

This overview will be helpful in gaining a better understanding of the historical, political and cultural context around this terminology.

Australia has traditionally been inhabited by two indigenous peoples that are ethnically and culturally very different – Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people. Aboriginal people comprise diverse Aboriginal nations, each with their own language and traditions, and have historically lived on mainland Australia, Tasmania and many of the continent’s offshore islands. Torres Strait Islander people come from the islands of the Torres Strait, between the tip of Cape York in Queensland and Papua New Guinea.5

In Aboriginal culture, the land was created by the journeys of the ‘Spirit Ancestors’ during a period known as the ‘Dreaming’ or ‘Dreamtime’. In song, story, poetry, art, drama and dance, the Dreamtime tells how the Spirit Ancestors (each symbolised by an animal which is the totem of the clan) gave life to the land and laid down the Law – the structure of society, rituals to maintain the life of the land and rules for human behaviour. The Dreamtime explains the origin of the universe, the workings of nature and of humanity, and the cycle of life and death. It shapes and structures Aboriginal life and the relations between the sexes, and prescribes a network of obligations to people, land and spirits.6

It is important to understand that according to the Dreaming, Aboriginal people did not own the land in the European sense, but rather, belonged to the land. The rule of the Law, as passed on by the Dreaming, was absolute throughout all aspects of Aboriginal life and was guarded by the Elders, select male and female people who possessed great knowledge of the Law. These Elders made important decisions, gave inspiration and advice, arranged marriages, organised learning, initiations and ceremonies, arbitrated and settled disputes, and fixed punishments if laws were broken.7
The Europeans did not understand Aboriginal culture, and the close connection between Aboriginal people and the land was not recognised under British law. Because Aboriginal land was deemed unoccupied it was declared ‘terra nullius’ – land belonging to no one – and was taken away without negotiations or treaties.\(^8\)

The remnants of Aboriginal clans were forced to relocate, sometimes hundreds of kilometres away from traditional lands, onto reserves or missions where they were forbidden to speak traditional languages or practice cultural traditions. Life on the missions was harsh and there was little respect for human rights. Aboriginal people were treated as incapable of managing their own lives and were subject to arbitrary rule by mission managers and police.\(^9\)

The Government’s policy of ‘protection’ towards Aboriginal people began in the 1880s and led to the creation of ‘protection boards’ in all Australian states. In 1883, NSW set up the NSW Aborigines Protection Board (later renamed Aborigines Welfare Board). This board was established based on the belief that nothing could protect Aboriginal people but ‘some controlling power which can not only offer them what is for their good but also constrain them to the acceptance of it’.\(^10\)

In practice, the policy of the NSW Aborigines Protection Board was that all Aboriginal people should live on reserves. The protection board could limit Aboriginal people’s movements, dictate where Aboriginal people could live, who they could associate with and how and when they would be paid wages for work performed. The NSW Aborigines Welfare Board was not abolished until 1969.\(^11\)

Under the Government’s protection and assimilation policies, protection boards throughout Australia oversaw the removal of thousands of Aboriginal children (known as the ‘Stolen Generations’) from their parents. Often, these children would be sent to ‘training homes’ where they were trained as domestic servants or farm labourers, or fostered out to non-Aboriginal families away from their community of origin. The personal and communal desolation resulting from the removal of Aboriginal children from their families was recognised at the 1996 hearings of the National Inquiry into the Separation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Children from their Families, which gave rise to the Bringing Them Home Report in May 1997.\(^12\)
The Government’s policies of protection and assimilation were not officially abandoned until 1972 when, as a direct result of growing Aboriginal activism, it was officially replaced with a policy of self-determination – defined as ‘Aboriginal communities deciding the pace and nature of their future development as significant components within a diverse Australia’.

Despite the enormous impacts of European colonisation on Aboriginal ways of life, Aboriginal people have survived and Aboriginal culture is alive and strong. It is estimated that there were 135,300 Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander people residing in NSW as of 30 June 2001.

Aboriginal people have fought long and hard for their rights and several important landmarks have marked modern Aboriginal history. For example, in 1983, the Aboriginal Land Rights Act 1983 (NSW) was passed in NSW, promoting Aboriginal land rights on the basis of needs and compensation as well as prior ownership and tradition. In 1992, in the historic Mabo judgement, the High Court of Australia reversed the concept of ‘terra nullius’ by holding that a ‘native title’ to land had survived the colonisation of Australia, thus enshrining Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander land rights in Australia’s common law.

Despite these advances, social indicators for Aboriginal people, including health indicators, remain the lowest of all Australian groups. Understanding the impacts of past injustices and striving to eliminate discriminatory practices are important factors in improving social outcomes for Aboriginal Australians.
Collective names used to describe Aboriginal people

Aboriginal/Aborigine

Description

An ‘Aboriginal person’ or an ‘Aborigine’ is a person who:

- is a member of the Aboriginal race of Australia
- identifies as an Aboriginal person
- is accepted by the Aboriginal community as an Aboriginal person.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

Although it is grammatically correct, beware when using the term ‘Aborigine(s)’ as it has negative connotations with many Aboriginal people. The use of ‘Aboriginal person’ or ‘Aboriginal people’ can be used as an alternative.

Be aware that the term ‘Aboriginal’ is not generally inclusive of Torres Strait Islander people, and reference to both Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people should therefore be spelt out where necessary. This notwithstanding, also note that within NSW Health, the term ‘Aboriginal’ is generally used in preference to ‘Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander’, in recognition that Aboriginal people are the original inhabitants of NSW (see NSW Health Circular No. 2003/55). For example:

✔️ NSW Health has recently produced and implemented the NSW Health Aboriginal Health Impact Statement.

Always capitalise the ‘A’ in ‘Aboriginal’ as you would other designations like ‘Australian’, ‘Arabic’ or ‘Nordic’. The word ‘aboriginal with a lowercase ‘a’ refers to an indigenous person from any part of the world. As such, it does not necessarily refer to the Aboriginal people of Australia.

Do not use ‘Aboriginal’ as a noun – it should only be used as an adjective.

✗ The Government’s new strategy will support increased business with Aboriginals.

✔️ The Government’s new strategy will support increased business with Aboriginal people.

Never abbreviate the term ‘Aboriginal’ as this is offensive.
Remember: when preparing speech notes that refer to ‘our history’, ensure that the use of the word ‘Australian(s)’ includes Aboriginal people/s. Consider the opening statement:

✗ ‘Most Australians continue to see Aboriginal people…’
This infers that Aboriginal people are not Australian, which is incorrect.
The correct terminology is:
✓ ‘Most non-Aboriginal Australians continue to see Aboriginal people…’

Aboriginal people(s)

Description
‘Aboriginal people’ is a collective name for the original people of Australia and their descendants, and does not emphasise the diversity of languages, cultural practices and spiritual beliefs. By adding an ‘s’ to ‘people’, you are emphasising this diversity.

‘Aboriginal people’ can also be used to refer to more than one Aboriginal person.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
Both ‘Aboriginal people’ and ‘Aboriginal peoples’ are acceptable depending on the context. For example:

✓ ‘At the time of European invasion, there were approximately 600 Aboriginal peoples’. Note that in this instance ‘peoples’ is used to describe the groups of Aboriginal people, each with their own language, cultural practices and beliefs.

✓ ‘At the time of European invasion, there were between 300,000 and 1 million Aboriginal people living in Australia.’ Note that in this instance ‘people’ refers to more than one person.

If you wish to emphasise the fact that Aboriginal people are Australians, consider the use of ‘Aboriginal Australian(s)’ instead of ‘Aboriginal people’.

Never abbreviate the term ‘Aboriginal’ as this is offensive.
First people/first Australians

Description
‘First people’ or ‘First Australians’ are collective names for the original people of Australia and their descendants, and are used to emphasise that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people lived on this continent prior to European invasion.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
Both ‘First people’ and ‘First Australians’ are acceptable. Use these terms to emphasise that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people lived on this continent before the European invasion.

Indigenous people(s)

Description
The Macquarie Dictionary defines ‘indigenous’ as ‘originating in and characterising a particular region or country’. Based on this definition, an indigenous person is a person originating or characterising a particular region or country.

The term can be problematic when applied to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. One area of concern is whether to capitalise the ‘I’ or use a lowercase ‘i’. Practice varies. For example, whilst United Nations documents tend not to capitalise ‘indigenous’ as they collectively refer to people originating from more than one region or country, Commonwealth documents generally capitalise ‘Indigenous’ as they refer specifically to Australian Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

The preferred option for NSW Health staff is to capitalise ‘Indigenous’ when referring to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
Because ‘Indigenous’ is not specific, some Aboriginal people feel that the term diminishes their Aboriginality and must be avoided.

NSW Health recommends using the terms ‘Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander’ in preference to ‘Indigenous’. If in doubt and before using the term ‘Indigenous’ ALWAYS consult with the local Aboriginal community.
Collective names used to describe Aboriginal people

If using the term ‘indigenous’, always capitalise ‘I’ when referring to Australian Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. For example:

✓ The Australian Government’s new strategy will support increased business with Indigenous people.

Note that the lower case ‘i’ for ‘indigenous’ is only used when referring to people originating in more than one region or country such as the Pacific region, Asiatic region, Canada, or New Zealand.

✓ Australia will be hosting the inter-country tennis competition where indigenous peoples from Canada, New Zealand and the Asiatic region will be competing for the right to challenge last year’s winners.

If using the term ‘Indigenous people’, define what you mean by ‘Indigenous’ – that is, if you are referring to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people, say so.

Torres Strait Islander/person

Description

A Torres Strait Islander or a Torres Strait Islander person is a person/descendant from the Torres Strait Islands which are located to the north of mainland Australia.

Note that although not originally from NSW, there are Torres Strait Islander people living in the state.

Recommended usage

Always capitalise ‘Torres Strait Islander’.

Never abbreviation the term ‘Torres Strait Islander’ as this is offensive.

Note that within NSW Health, the term ‘Aboriginal’ is generally used in preference to ‘Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander’, in recognition that Aboriginal people are the original inhabitants of NSW (see NSW Health Circular No. 2003/55).

For example:

✓ NSW Health has recently produced and implemented the NSW Health Aboriginal Health Impact Statement.
Goori/Koori/Murri/Nunga and other such terms

Description

These terms are directly derived from Aboriginal languages and are the names used by Aboriginal people in specific areas when referring to themselves. Note that many Aboriginal people from other areas of Australia reside within NSW and still use their traditional names. Some examples of these terms are:

- Goori – is usually used by Aboriginal people in northern NSW coastal regions
- Koori – is usually used by Aboriginal people in parts of NSW and Victoria
- Murri – is usually used by Aboriginal people in north-west NSW and Queensland
- Nunga – is usually used by Aboriginal people in South Australia
- Yolngu – is usually used by Aboriginal people in Northern Territory (north-east Arnhem Land)
- Anangu – is usually used by Aboriginal people in Central Australia
- Noongar – is usually used by Aboriginal people in south-west Western Australia

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

Always check with the local Aboriginal community about using this type of terminology. There are many Aboriginal language groups within the above-mentioned areas and the use of such terms can be restrictive.
Terms associated with Aboriginal communities and community organisations

Clan

Description

The ‘clan’ is a local descent group, larger than a family but based on family links through a common ancestry. A ‘clan’ is a subset of a nation. For example, the Yuin nation in southeastern NSW has several clans within it.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

Be aware that the term ‘clan’ has a specific meaning which is derived from non-Aboriginal societies, and therefore may not necessarily be applicable to Aboriginal culture. Some Aboriginal people use the term and such usage should be respected. If unsure, ask the local community for guidance.

Community

Description

There are many different perspectives on what a ‘community’ is. Non-Aboriginal people often use ‘community’ to refer to a particular geographical locality. For example, the use of the expression ‘Kempsey Aboriginal community’ refers to all the Aboriginal people living in and around Kempsey.

However, it is important to understand that Aboriginal people were forcibly removed from their ancestral lands to live elsewhere. For instance the ‘Kempsey Aboriginal community’ comprises Aboriginal people from many areas of Australia but the traditional owners of the land are the Dunghutti people. Therefore, what non-Aboriginal people see as one Aboriginal community is in fact not necessarily seen as such by Aboriginal people.

Note that an Aboriginal person may belong to more than one community – for example, where they come from, where their family is and where they live or work. The important thing to remember is that in Aboriginal culture a community is first and foremost about country, (extended) family ties and shared experience. Community is about interrelatedness and belonging and is central to Aboriginality.
Terms associated with Aboriginal communities and community organisations

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

It is generally acceptable to use the term ‘community’ to refer to Aboriginal people living within a particular geographical location. However, keep in mind the diversity of Aboriginal people within that ‘community’.

If you wish to emphasise the diversity of communities within the one geographical location, use ‘communities’ in the plural form. For example:

☑ Bourke has two distinct Aboriginal communities – the local community which lives some three kilometres from Bourke in a settlement known as the Alice Edwards Village, and the local population living in Bourke itself.

Country

Description

‘Country’ is a term used to describe a culturally defined area of land associated with a particular, culturally distinct group of people or nation. For example:

☑ Dubbo is in Wiradjuri country.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

Use ‘country’ to refer to a particular, culturally defined area of land, such as ‘Wiradjuri country’ or ‘Dunghutti country’.
Elder

Description
The traditional meaning of an Aboriginal Elder is someone who has gained recognition within their community as a custodian of knowledge and lore, and who has permission to disclose cultural knowledge and beliefs. Recognised Elders are highly respected people within Aboriginal communities.

In some instances, Aboriginal people above a certain age will refer to themselves as Elders. However, it is important to understand that in traditional Aboriginal culture, age alone does not necessarily mean that one is a recognised Elder.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
The use of Elder (upper case) is generally acceptable, but it is important to be aware of the differences in meaning outlined above.

When negotiating with Aboriginal communities, ensure that recognised Elders are involved. This may occur indirectly – for example, a recognised Aboriginal community controlled peak body such as the AH&MRC, or the local ACCHS, may be willing to negotiate with Elders on your behalf.

Be aware that although negotiation with recognised Elders is important, it should not replace negotiation with Aboriginal community organisations, such as an ACCHS.

Mob

Description
‘Mob’ is a term identifying a group of Aboriginal people associated with a particular place or country.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
‘Mob’ is a term that is extremely important to Aboriginal people because it is used to identify who they are and where they are from. ‘Mob’ is generally used by Aboriginal people and between Aboriginal people. Therefore, it may not be appropriate for non-Aboriginal people to use this term unless this is known to be acceptable to Aboriginal people.
Nation

Description

‘Nation’ refers to a culturally distinct group of people associated with a particular, culturally defined area of land or country. Each nation has boundaries that cannot be changed, and language is tied to that nation and its country.

The Aboriginal NSW map over page is a pictorial study guide prepared by the Central Mapping Authority of NSW, now known as the Department of Lands, in consultation with the Department of Education and the Aboriginal Education Consultative Group. The map sets out the location of Aboriginal nations within NSW. Please note that these locations are only approximate and may not be conclusive in the view of some Aboriginal people.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

Use ‘nation’ to refer to a culturally distinct Aboriginal group and its associated country. For example:

✔️ The Gumbbayngirr nation is located around the Nambucca Heads area.

Be aware that the boundaries of some Aboriginal nations (eg Yorta Yorta) cross over state boundaries. This has important implications for service delivery and provision, as well as negotiation processes.
Terms associated with Aboriginal communities and community organisations

Source: map supplied courtesy of the Central Mapping Authority,
NSW Department of Lands
Terms associated with Aboriginal communities and community organisations

Traditional owner

Description

A ‘Traditional owner(s)’ is an Aboriginal person or group of Aboriginal people directly descended from the original Aboriginal inhabitants of a culturally defined area of land or country, and has a cultural association with this country that derives from the traditions, observances, customs, beliefs or history of the original Aboriginal inhabitants of the area.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

Use ‘traditional owner(s)’ to refer to an Aboriginal person or group of Aboriginal people as defined above. For example:

✓ In 1998, the NSW National Parks and Wildlife Service handed back Mutawintji National Park to its traditional owners.

Tribe

Description

Like ‘nation’, a ‘tribe’ refers to a culturally distinct group of people associated with a particular, culturally defined area of land or country.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

Be aware that ‘tribe’ has a specific meaning derived from non-Aboriginal societies, and therefore may not necessarily be applicable to Aboriginal culture. Some Aboriginal people use the term and such usage should be respected. If unsure ask the local community for guidance.
Other terms

Assimilation policy

Description

In 1937 the Commonwealth Government convened a conference with the states where it was officially agreed that the aim for those Aboriginal people not of ‘full-blood’ should be their ultimate absorption into the wider population. This policy, referred to as ‘assimilation’, was designed to solve the ‘Aboriginal problem’ by ensuring that Aboriginal people would lose their identity and culture within the wider community.

Under the Government’s assimilation policy, thousands of Aboriginal children were removed from their parents. Often, these children would be sent to ‘training homes’ where they were trained as domestic servants or farm labourers, or fostered out to non-Aboriginal families away from their community of origin. The personal and communal desolation resulting from the removal of Aboriginal children from their families was recognised at the 1996 hearings of the National Inquiry into the Separation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Children from their Families, which gave rise to the Bringing Them Home Report in May 1997.21

The Government’s policy of assimilation was not officially abandoned until 1972 when, as a direct result of growing Aboriginal activism, it was officially replaced with a policy of self-determination – defined as ‘Aboriginal communities deciding the pace and nature of their future development as significant components within a diverse Australia’.22

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

Be aware of the history of abuse of Aboriginal people’s human rights by Government authorities. This history has given rise to ongoing mistrust of Government by Aboriginal people.
Culture

Description

‘Culture’ consists of ‘accepted and traditionally patterned ways of behaving’. It is a ‘common understanding shared by the members of a group or community. It includes land, beliefs and spirituality, language, ways of living and working, artistic expression, relationships and identity’\(^{23}\).

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

Be aware that traditionally, and until today Aboriginal cultures were/are many and varied (ie there is no one homogeneous Aboriginal culture).

Be aware that like all cultures, Aboriginal cultures have evolved over time, and that modern Aboriginal cultures are therefore different from traditional Aboriginal cultures.

When working in partnership with Aboriginal communities, it is important that there be an awareness and understanding of the local Aboriginal culture.

Ways to do this include inviting members of the Aboriginal community to participate in activities organised by health service providers. Such activities may include launches, conferences, publication designs and major events such as ‘Journey of Healing Day’ (May 26 each year) and ‘NAIDOC Week’ (held annually, generally in the second week of July).
Invasion/colonisation/settlement

Description
Colonisation of Australia began with invasion at the time of the landing of the First Fleet in 1788. Although there were between 300,000 and 1 million Aboriginal people living on the mainland at that time, the European people claimed land under the legal fiction of ‘terra nullius’, meaning it belonged to no one.

The colonisers claimed the land for their own purposes with no thought to the impact this would have on Aboriginal people and culture. This is referred to as the European invasion.

Following the invasion, settlement spread piecemeal across the country. This was accompanied by a drastic decline in the Aboriginal population as the invasion brought with it the introduction of diseases to which Aboriginal people had no immunity. The traditional ways were destroyed as hunting grounds were taken over for grazing and agriculture, causing Aboriginal people to be treated as trespassers on their own land under European law.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
When discussing the colonisation of NSW, do not use the terminology ‘European settlement’ or ‘European arrival’. The preferred and accepted terminology is ‘European invasion’ or European colonisation’.

Land rights

Description
To Aboriginal communities, land is not only about hunting and gathering, it is also the basis of spiritual life. The aim of the land rights movement is to counteract the land dispossession of Aboriginal people that occurred with European invasion.

In NSW, the Aboriginal Land Rights Act – legislated in 1983 and amended in 2001 – gave the right for NSW and local Aboriginal land councils to make claims to vacant land held under the Crown Lands Act 1989 (NSW).

The Aboriginal Land Rights Act 1989 (NSW) also gave power for Aboriginal people to seek agreements with any landowner on access rights to hunt, fish and gather.
Other terms

Recommended usage/issues for consideration

Do not confuse the Aboriginal Land Rights Act 1983 (NSW) with the Native Title Act 1993 (Commonwealth).

Be aware of the difference between land claimable under the Aboriginal Land Rights Act 1983 (NSW) and that claimable under the Native Title Act 1993 (Commonwealth).

Be aware that the operation of the Aboriginal Land Rights Act 1983 (NSW) has created a range of concerns within some Aboriginal communities.

Mission/reserve

Description

Missions were first set up in the 19th century by Christian missionaries, ostensibly to attend to what missionaries considered being the spiritual and material welfare needs of Aboriginal people. In reality, these missions were largely about ‘christianising’ Aboriginal people and teaching them what was considered ‘habits of order, industry and subordination’. Life on these missions is described by Richard Broome in Aboriginal Australia as:

“All the work was done by Aboriginals. They were told: ‘do not go around naked, do not be dirty, do not work on Sunday, and do not drink, smoke or be promiscuous. Corroborees were usually forbidden. Children had to wear uniforms and work, play, learn and pray according to clockwork schedules’.”

Examples of these early 19th century missions in NSW were Cumeragunja, Warangesda and Brewarrina. In the late 1880s, these and other places where Aboriginal people had settled were taken over by the colonial government and run as stations or reserves. By 1900, there were 133 reserves.

Life on these missions or reserves was incredibly harsh, with poor living conditions, no access to education and little respect for the human rights, cultural needs and practices of Aboriginal people.

Aboriginal people were forced to leave their traditional lands or country to live on reserves, which was extremely restrictive to their traditional way of life as hunters and gatherers. Relocation of Aboriginal people to lands away from their traditional area also resulted in the destruction of families, culture and Aboriginal cultural lore, and sometimes led to animosity between the various traditional groups struggling to survive.

Reserve or mission managers controlled and regimented every aspect of Aboriginal peoples’ lives. They had the right to search Aboriginal people, their dwellings and belongings at any time, confiscate their property, read their mail and order medical inspections. They could also order children to sleep in dormitories, expel Aboriginal people to other reserves and break-up families.26

Life on the missions had disastrous effects on the health of Aboriginal people as they were forced to give up traditional foods for a diet made up almost exclusively of flour and sugar. Sitting around was less healthy than hunting and food gathering, and living in one place caused significant hygiene problems.27

Most importantly, Aboriginal people were prohibited from sharing, learning and enjoying traditional culture, language and family associations. They were also forbidden from speaking traditional languages and practicing their culture in the form of ceremonies, rites of passage and corroborees. Breaking these rules attracted serious penalties, including the expulsion of individuals from the mission or reserve.

The human rights abuses and active attempts to destroy Aboriginal culture had deep and long-term effects on Aboriginal people that continue to be felt today.

Recommended usage/Issues for consideration

Be aware of the sensitive issues that have arisen in Aboriginal communities as a result of forced removal from their traditional lands onto missions and reserves, for example – the history of grief, loss and trauma.

Be aware that the forced removal of Aboriginal people and placement on missions caused many conflicts. Often members of Aboriginal tribes/clans/nations were placed with Aboriginal people from other tribes/clans/nations who were traditional enemies. These issues need to be considered when working in partnership with Aboriginal people and communities.

Be aware of the negative connotations associated with the expression ‘mission manager’. Today, this term is sometimes used to refer to someone who is acting in a controlling, disempowering and/or degrading way towards Aboriginal people.
Native title

Description
The legal recognition in 1993 of the existence of native title in Australia reversed the concept of ‘terra nullius’, which held that land belonged to no one at the time of European invasion.

Native title is the official recognition under federal Australian law of the traditional rights and interests of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people in relation to land and water.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
When using the term ‘native title’, be aware of the difference between land claimable under the Aboriginal Land Rights Act 1983 (NSW) and that claimable under the Native Title Act 1993 (Commonwealth).

Be aware that the operation of the Native Title Act 1993 (Commonwealth) has created a range of concerns within some Aboriginal communities.

Pre/post contact

Description
‘Pre and post contact’ refers to the period before and after European invasion.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
‘Pre and post contact’ is the preferred terminology to refer to the period before and after European invasion. Note that using the terminology ‘pre-history/post-history’ is not acceptable as it infers that history in NSW did not begin until the landing of the First Fleet and subsequent European invasion, and that Aboriginal culture has no history. In fact Aboriginal culture is the oldest surviving culture in the world.
Protection policy

Description
From the 1880s until the 1960s, the NSW Government adopted what is commonly referred to as a regime of ‘protection’ toward Aboriginal people.

In practice, this regime of ‘protection’ meant that the government controlled almost every aspect of the lives of Aboriginal people, dictating where they could live and work, freedom of movement, personal finances and child-rearing practices.

In 1883, the NSW Government established its first Aborigines Protection Board and in 1909, it passed the Aboriginal Protection Act.

It was under the NSW Aborigines Protection Board, later renamed the Aborigines Welfare Board, that thousands of Aboriginal children were removed from their parents and institutionalised, sometimes for the rest of their lives.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
Be aware of the history of abuse of Aboriginal peoples’ human rights by government authorities. This history has given rise to ongoing mistrust of government by Aboriginal people.

Self-determination

Description
Following the federal election in 1972, the assimilation policy that had dominated Aboriginal affairs for 20 years was replaced by a policy of self-determination. Self-determination is about Aboriginal people being empowered to decide the pace and nature of their own future. This policy is based on the recognition that Aboriginal people should be actively involved in all decision-making that affects their lives.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
In line with the concept of self-determination, the active involvement of Aboriginal people in all decision making affecting Aboriginal health is fundamental.
Stolen Generations

Description
Under the Government’s protection and assimilation policies, protection boards throughout Australia oversaw the removal of thousands of Aboriginal children (known as the ‘Stolen Generations’) from their parents. Often, these children would be sent to ‘training homes’ where they were trained as domestic servants or farm labourers, or fostered out to non-Aboriginal families away from their community of origin. The personal and communal desolation resulting from the removal of Aboriginal children from their families was recognised at the 1996 hearings of the National Inquiry into the Separation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Children from their Families, which gave rise to the Bringing Them Home Report in May 1997.

The ‘Stolen Generations’ have had immense impacts on Aboriginal culture, community and relationships since 1883 to as late as 1972. These impacts are ongoing until today and range from psychological harm to loss of native title entitlements, increased risk of incarceration, poverty, poor health and early death.

Recommended usage/issues for consideration
Issues surrounding the Stolen Generations need to be considered when working in partnership with Aboriginal people and communities.
Terms not to be used

The following terminology is inappropriate or dated, and MUST BE AVOIDED AT ALL TIMES AS IT IS OFFENSIVE:

- ATSI
- Native
- Mixed blood
- Half-caste
- Quarter-caste
- Full-blood
- Part-Aboriginal
- 25%, 50% Aboriginal
- Them
- Them people
- Those people
- Those folk
- You people

‘them’

- ✗ involving them in policy making decisions...
- ✓ involving members of the Aboriginal community in policy making decisions...

‘those people’

- ✗ an invitation inviting those people to attend the meeting will be sent out on …
- ✓ an invitation inviting members of the Aboriginal community to attend the meeting will be sent out on…

‘you people’

- ✗ if you people need…
- ✓ If the Aboriginal community needs…
Clearly, the following terms are also offensive and should never be used:

- coloured
- primitive
- nigger
- lubra
- gin
- abo
- coon
- boong
- savage
- jacki jacki
- coconut
- sooty
- darky
- blacks
Additional resources

Additional reading

Useful websites
www.yarrahealing.melb.catholic.edu.au
www.atsic.gov.au/News_Room/As a Matter of Fact/default.asp
www.unisanet.unisa.edu.au
Guidelines for non-racist language use in Aboriginal and Australian Studies – Developed by David Hollinsworth www.nswalc.org.au
for further information regarding Native Title and Land Rights and Aboriginal issues.
www.faira.org.au
www.aiatsis.gov.au
www.dreamtime.net.au/Indigenous www.daa.nsw.gov.au
www.library.trinity.wa.edu.au/aborigines/terms.htm
References

1. NSW Department of Aboriginal Affairs (2003), NSW Draft Aboriginal Languages Policy

3. NSW Department of Aboriginal Affairs, op.cit.

4. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission (1999). As a Matter of Fact – Aboriginal History is not Australian History. Canberra: 1

6. Ibid: 17

7. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission, op.cit: 9

8. Ibid: 10

9. Miller J, quoted in Parbury, op.cit: 11

10. Parbury, op.cit: 87

11. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission, op.cit: 11

12. Ibid: 11

14. Aboriginal Land Rights Act 1983 (NSW): Section 4(1)

15. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission, op.cit: 8

16. Ibid: 42

18. Ibid: 122

20. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission, op.cit: 11

21. Ibid: 11

22. NSW Office of the Board of Studies, op.cit: 30

23. Quoted in Parbury, op.cit: 51

24. Parbury, op.cit: 51

25. Ibid: 87

26. Ibid: 51

27. Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission, op.cit: 1