

Willis Re Australia announces new head of client advocacy

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, June 11, 2019 — Willis Re, the reinsurance division of Willis Towers Watson, a leading global advisory, broking and solutions company (NASDAQ:WLTW), announced today the appointment of Alexandra (Alex) Dickinson as Head of Client Advocacy.

In this new role, Dickinson will be responsible for the development of the local team, connecting Willis Re Australia's clients to the global insurance market and opening doors to new business opportunities through her experience and global connections. Based in Sydney, Dickinson reports to Cameron Green, CEO of Willis Re Australia. She will also be part of Willis Re Australia's Executive Committee.

Dickinson joined Willis Re in 2012 and has relocated from Willis Re's New York office where she was an Executive Vice President handling production and client account management for Willis Re North America. She was responsible for the strategy and placement of a number of global accounts, working closely with the property business leaders throughout North America. She has extensive experience with Willis Re's public/private partnership group, insurance-focused M&A transactions and the structuring and execution of catastrophe bonds.

Commenting on the appointment, Cameron Green, CEO of Willis Re Australia, said: "We continue to focus on ways to further deepen the relationship we have with our clients. Alex joining our team builds on our vision to deliver the strongest knowledge, insight and solutions in the market to our clients, allowing them to confidently manage reinsurance related risks and extremes.

"This appointment is also testament to the investment in talent that Willis Re continues to make. Our clients expect us to deliver excellence and innovation. There is no doubt Alex, alongside the other colleagues who have joined our team this year, will make significant contributions as we continue to drive growth and foster a diverse, high performance culture in Willis Re Australia."
