THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY IN AUSTRALIA CODE OF CONDUCT

Introduction

All members, employees and committee members of The Theosophical Society in Australia (“the Society”) are expected to abide by the Rules and Code of Conduct of the Society. This document provides the code of conduct of members, employees and committee members and requires the standards of ethical behaviour that reflect the ideal of Universal Brotherhood of the Society. The Society’s expectations of ethical behaviour have three underpinning principles:

- Universal Brotherhood and Service;
- Courtesy, Consideration and Cooperation; and
- Diligence

This Code of Conduct outlines the meaning of these principles. The Code of Conduct applies to all members, employees and or committee members regardless of:

- The type of membership;
- The type of employment;
- Position on any committee.

Underpinning principles

The underpinning principles are defined as follows:

Universal Brotherhood and Service

- Each member of the Society is requested to remember at all times the ideal of the Universal Brotherhood as expressed in the First Object of the Society and to reflect this in his/her behavior in all:
 - Interactions with members and non-members;
 - Committee meetings;
 - Dealings with employees.
- Each members of the Society is requested to become familiar with the three Objects, the General Council Resolutions on Freedom of Thought, and Freedom of the Society.

Courtesy, Consideration and Cooperation

- Treat members, employees and committee members of the Society with respect and courtesy, having regard for the dignity of the people with whom you interact.
- Do not engage in bullying or other forms of discrimination or harassment, including sexual harassment.
- All members, employees and committee members are requested to conduct their duties in the most professional and cooperative manner possible in accordance with the relevant Lodge/Branch/Group Rules, the National and International Rules of the Theosophical Society and Australian laws.

Diligence

- Keep in mind the best interests of the Society rather than personal interests when decisions are made regarding the Society.
- Ensure all decisions are transparent and in keeping with confidentiality requirements.
- Act with honesty, integrity and transparency in all dealings with other members, employees and committee members.

Consequences

Breaching the Code of Conduct may result in disciplinary action ranging from a warning through to suspension or termination of membership, and/or employment.

Code of Conduct in Action

Respect and courtesy

Other members, employees and/or committee members are entitled to receive personal respect and courtesy and to maintain their dignity in their interaction with you.

Behaving honestly

As a Society member, employee or committee member you are required to act honestly while involved in activities of the Society at all times.

Conflict of interest

A conflict of interest is where your financial or other interests or those of an associate are, or may reasonably be seen to be, in opposition to your interests as a member, employee and/or committee member of the Society. An associate is taken to be a spouse, parent, child, more distant relative or business associate. A conflict of interest may come in many forms and must be managed at the earliest possible opportunity. For example, becoming involved in decision making where you, a family member or a friend has a financial or personal interest in the outcome, such as making a decision about the recipient of business from the Society, is a conflict of interest. In this and other cases, you must disclose a conflict of interest or possible potential conflict of interest immediately and in writing to your Executive Committee and take whatever action they decide is necessary to avoid a conflict of interest. If you are unsure whether a situation is a potential conflict of interest, seek advice from the President.

Accepting gifts, benefits or favours

You should not accept gifts, benefits or favours where these may influence, or may reasonably be seen to influence, your decision making. For example, accepting gifts from a contractor would normally be perceived as inappropriate regardless of the cost of the gift.

Preventing nepotism and patronage

It is unacceptable to favour your relatives (nepotism) or people you know (patronage) in your decision making and provision of service. For example, if your relatives or friends are the subject in a committee or work matter for which you are a responsible decision maker you must ensure that you are not improperly involved.

No discrimination

In line with the Society's First Object discrimination, directly or indirectly, in your treatment of individuals or groups on the grounds of age, gender, race, disability, sexuality, marital status, pregnancy, or any other ground covered by equal opportunity or other antidiscrimination legislation is unlawful, as is sexual harassment and will not be tolerated.

Bullying/harassment

Members, employees and/or committee members must not bully or otherwise harass other members, employees and/or committee members or members of the public. Behaviours that characterise bullying may include victimisation and unwelcome, offensive, abusive, belittling or threatening behaviour directed at another person or a group of people. Bullying may lead to the person or group of people subjected to the behaviour feeling victimised, offended, demeaned, humiliated, intimidated, or suffering detriment or disadvantage.

Confidentiality, use of information and public comment

The National Headquarters does not divulge personal information about TS members without their consent. Be scrupulous in using information gained through your membership, employment and/or committee membership, that is, for the purpose for which it was gathered. You should comply with any applicable directions and guidelines on the use of information. The privacy of individuals must be maintained and personal information must only be released in accordance with privacy requirements as allowed by law.

Reporting of misconduct, corruption or illegal activity

The community expects the Society to have a high standard of integrity and be free from misconduct, corruption or other illegal activity. Everyone has a role in ensuring that the Society's members, employees and/or committee members are held accountable for inappropriate conduct where it results in detriment to the Society or another person. If you do make a report of misconduct, you must have a reasonable belief that the reported conduct is a breach of the Society's Rules or Code of Conduct or is illegal, or both. You must not knowingly make a false disclosure. Prior to making a report you may wish to seek advice. Advice may be obtained from the President.

Grievance Procedure

A complaint by a member of a Lodge/Branch concerning a perceived breach of the Code of Conduct, and which pertains to that Branch shall be made in writing to the committee of the Lodge/Branch concerned with a view to a resolution. It is preferable that such complaints be resolved within a Lodge/Branch. If a satisfactory resolution cannot be reached, the complainant or the Lodge/Branch committee may forward the complaint to the National President, or the National Vice-President if the matter concerns the National President.
