Social Engineering in the ADF

Listeners, if you are like me then you will be very worried about Australia and the direction the nation is travelling. It seems at every turn human values are now judge by the dollar and by minority groups which claim mandates based on antidiscrimination. By using society's broader sense of conscience minority groups are amplifying their voices way above their representative numeric value in this democracy. It's an aberated freedom which unbalances society and gives rise to distrust as the majority of us are corralled and restrained by those who seek to own the social and moral agenda. These movements and people are often misguided and wrong in my view. For minority groups to succeed in their myopic quest the general populace has to be lethargic and apathetic and so mix that with obsessive antidiscrimination laws and you have the long term erosion of so many values we know are vital in society. To conform is a lesson we learn slowly but when we do its patently obvious that stability holds society together and provides certainty. It is the ambiguity in today's community which causes society to lurch from one extreme to another and from one standard to another, creating dishonest conversations and selfish arguments where immorality is often the outcome.

As society is further high jacked we actually lose freedom and a whole new language has been established under the banner of political correctness which only adds to the problem and promotes unrest in the majority of Australians. This sea of words has become a euphemistic treadmill to justify the unjustifiable and here are some examples; outcomes, inclusion, gender reassignment, intersex, diversity, gender dysphoria, efficiency dividends, implementation, performance indicators and many more all ignore the elephant in the room. The modern politically correct lexicon is now even fooling our finest military men and women.

So here's the rub, the Australian Army is on a mission to be so inclusive it's lost the plot. It appears the prime purpose of the armed forces is not to protect and defend but to promote sexual oddities and vilify those who dare to disagree and to utterly ignore the normal rational men and women at the front line. The army has been internally invaded by the gender challenged mob who seem to have an unbridled say in what goes on. The army now pays for gender change operations, allows its service men and women to march in uniform in the erotic and shameful Sydney gay and lesbian mardi gras and gives rights to that genre to do and say things which the enlisted straight contingent cant. It's unfair nasty stuff.

An example is the newly released army lapel pin and cuff link set sporting the traditional Australian Army rising sun insignia and accompanied by the rainbow of the gay or homosexual movement. That's right, the Army has married the precious Australian rising sun emblem to the gay and lesbian rainbow logo. This obviously allows others to recognise the enlisted member as a sexually challenged recruit and perhaps doubles as a dating service. This is social engineering at its most vigorous and is a potentially very damaging precedent. The common soldier does not see this active promotion of the gender challenged as right or normal and many do not see it as compatible in the forces. They are however afraid to speak up for fear of senior retribution and so much for true freedom of speech. In defence of this latest nonsense to identify and normalise the sexually aberated their support group called DEFGLIS tries to explain their charter by saying, "The tight knit cohesion required of combat units isn't achieved by hating". This simple innocuous statement attempts to lay blame at the feet of those who don't agree with them and to find fault with anyone who doesn't see the need for an elevated homosexual military presence. It also says those who don't agree must hate homosexuals which is patently stupid. In my view this is a good example of how the amplified voices of a misguided minority take over the agenda and of all places in the Australian Army. Public money should not be spent on rainbow cuff links and lapel pins and it's wrong to link the precious Australian military symbol of the rising sun with a political movement which seeks to explain the unexplainable. As an Australian I am saddened to see the ADF successfully infiltrated and over run by people with an agenda for which I believe they have no mandate or precedent. I say shame on the politicians and the ADF for making life so difficult for the regular soldier and to start a civil war from within.
