MENTORING PROGRAM For sustainable career and livelihood development

With the growing demand for quality employment it is now more than ever the time to understand your point of difference and what it is that makes you a stand out applicant. There are also many of us who do not aspire to be employed but want to march to our own drum and find an opportunity where we can be more independent, such as in business, to fulfil a passion or vision.

Often the demands of getting into and then undertaking a course of study are so great that there is no time or place to reflect on what it is we really aspire to and how to create that. The Mentoring Program, delivered by MapYou Founder Jennifer Joi Field, provides a great opportunity for this purposeful reflection to clarify/identify your best opportunities.

Who can benefit from the MapYou Mentoring Program ©

This mentoring program will be of most benefit to students who are seeking to clarify and establish their sustainable career path. The Program would be of great benefit to mature aged students wishing to enhance their career options or students who are dissatisfied or confused about their current career choices. This can benefit students when

- trying to establish or develop a specific career pathway and do not know how to
- young entrepreneurs are wanting to establish an enterprise to launch their career
- students are challenged by early career development
- mature students who are in career transition and not clear on their next step
- students wanting to identify totally new career opportunities, or new study paths
- International students who wanting to establish their career in Australia, or at home, and who feel dissatisfied or confused with the direction they are currently taking

How you will benefit

A student who joins the Career Mentoring Program will have support and assistance from a mentor who has more than twenty years of capacity building experience with people from diverse cultural groups, facilitating livelihood/career development. Many examples of this capacity building and mentoring work undertaken by Jennifer Joi Field with individuals and groups can be found at www.culturalmapping.com in the case studies, and at www.writtenintheland.org Ms Field is now undertaking a doctoral research study through Curtin University in partnership with a large Cooperative Research Centre, to establish new knowledge on ways of establishing sustainable careers and livelihoods. A blog and research study website is soon to be located here www.mappingforsustainablefutures.org

How the mentoring sessions are conducted

There is no obligation to stay beyond a single session; it all depends on the individual as to how quickly they progress. The mentoring sessions are delivered individually or in groups (e.g. a class group). The sessions are for 45 minutes and cost $25 per person, per session, for groups of not less than 5 students. Public group sessions are also available at $25 per person, per session.

1 hour sessions for groups of 10 or more receive a 15% discount.
Alternatively one on one session’s can be delivered at $65 for a 30 minute online session. Sessions for larger groups will be delivered as either online webinars or at your place of study.
